There has never been a better time to net.

Two Ways to Net

RepoClear provides two ways for you to net your trades: balance sheet netting, which helps you manage capital costs; and settlement netting, which simplifies your operational workflow.

Netting Makes Your Capital Work Harder

In today's ever-evolving markets, the need for capital and operational efficiencies has never been greater. Netting responds to these demands by helping to optimise capital management and generate significant operational and cost benefits.

For over 20 years, RepoClear has harnessed its unparalleled depth of clearing liquidity to deliver these efficiencies, along with peerless risk management from the world's leading provider of interest rate derivatives clearing services.

As we expand our clearing and netting of cash and repo products across Europe, multilateral netting through RepoClear will increasingly provide superior balance sheet, settlement and risk offset to our 100-plus members across 14 government bond markets.

We are broadening our services to include Sponsored Clearing, which extends the benefits of CCP membership to the buy-side community. The addition of Sponsored Clearing further increases the netting benefits available, freeing up capacity and offering the opportunity to broaden the liquidity for all participants. To find out more, contact a member of the team.

Given these opportunities to net positions, now is the time to take advantage of the economic benefits of clearing with RepoClear.

Balance Sheet Netting: How It Works

Balance sheet netting gives you more control over your risk exposure and capital costs, especially against the backdrop of Basel III and other regulatory requirements.

How? By clearing, LCH becomes the counterparty to your trades. This allows you to net your portfolio and reduce notional outstanding, freeing up capital and increasing your trading capacity. Even better, these benefits are scalable; the more you net, the more efficient you become.

To net your trades, you typically need the following:

01. The same counterparty
02. The same currency
03. The same maturity date
04. The same settlement location

Settlement Netting: How It Works

Settlement netting through RepoClear reduces costs and simplifies trade processing. When you clear with LCH, not only can you net down the number of daily settlements, but you can also use our economies of scale as a market leader to reduce risk.

Similar to balance sheet netting, settlement netting typically requires the following:

01. The same counterparty
02. The same security
03. The same settlement date
04. The same settlement location
